

Fragment of ancient Greek papyrus with approximately 25 lines of text. The script is a cursive hand, likely from the Hellenistic or Roman period. The text is densely packed and shows signs of significant wear and tear, with many characters being difficult to decipher due to the fragment's irregular shape and the fading of the ink.

Fragment of ancient Greek papyrus with approximately 25 lines of text. The script is a cursive hand, likely from the Hellenistic or Roman period. The text is densely packed and shows signs of significant wear and tear, with many characters being difficult to decipher due to the fragment's irregular shape and the fading of the ink.

Fragment of a papyrus scroll with dense handwritten text in a cursive script, likely from an ancient Greek or Roman document. The text is arranged in approximately 25 horizontal lines, though the bottom portion is significantly damaged and illegible. The ink is dark, and the papyrus fibers are clearly visible throughout the fragment.

Fragment of a papyrus scroll with handwritten text in a cursive script. This fragment is shorter than the one on the left, containing about 5 lines of text. The script is consistent with the adjacent fragment, suggesting they are from the same document. The text is mostly legible but ends abruptly due to the fragment's irregular shape.