

This image shows a fragment of an ancient Greek manuscript, possibly on papyrus, which has suffered significant damage. The paper is light brown and shows numerous large, irregular holes, particularly along the left edge, suggesting insect damage or environmental factors. The text is written in a dark, handwritten-style font, likely Byzantine, in a single column from right to left. The script consists of small, rounded letters. Some words are partially obscured by the damage, but others are clearly legible, such as 'εγένετο' (was born), 'πάτερ' (father), and 'μητέρα' (mother). The overall condition of the document is poor, with large areas of the original text lost.
