

Handwritten text in a cursive script, likely a list or account. The text is arranged in approximately 10 horizontal lines. Each line begins with a small, distinct symbol or character, possibly serving as a marker or index. The script is dense and difficult to decipher without knowledge of the specific language or dialect used.

A second block of handwritten text, consisting of about 8 lines. Like the first block, it starts with small symbols on the left margin. The handwriting is consistent with the first block, suggesting it is part of the same document or record.

A third block of handwritten text, also approximately 8 lines long. It continues the list-like structure with small symbols on the left. The overall appearance is that of a detailed ledger or a collection of entries from a historical record.
