

The left side of the scroll is filled with approximately 15 vertical columns of hieroglyphic text. The text is arranged in a regular grid, with each column containing a continuous sequence of symbols. The hieroglyphs are finely etched into the papyrus surface and represent a form of ancient Egyptian writing, likely used for recording information related to the scenes depicted in the illustrations.